The Story of the "Safe Burglary."

When a committee of Congress began, some years ago, to investigate the trauds and thefts of the Washington Improvement Ring, the influential persons concerned, whom a discovery would have ruined, stopped at nothing to prevent it. The committee had, fortunately, help from some of the honest and substantial citizens of Washington, chief among whom was Mr. Columbus Alexander, a gentleman who has shown remarkable pertinacity and ability in his long pursuit of the Ring. It was, we believe, at Mr. Alexander's suggestion that the committee required the leading men of the Ring to produce the books in which the course and cost of the city improvements were set d wo, and who pointed out, when a set of books were produced, that these were false and that the genuine books were still con-Thereupon it occurred to some of the Ring to endeavor to get rid of Mr. Alexander, by implicating him in what would have the appearance of a criminal act. A spy was sent to Mr. Alexander, who told him that the real books were in a safe in the office of the Di-trict Attorney, and that if he would pay a cotain sum of money the office could be entered. the safe broken open and the books handed over to him. Mr. Alexander replied that he would have nothing to do with such a tracsaction, and this little plot failed. The plan of entrapping him, however, had been formed, and was not so easily abandoned.

Two burglars had been hired, and other preparations made, and so the spy was again sent to Mr. Alexander with a simpler propositionthat on a certain night the books would be brought to him; and it was determined by the conspirators to post well instructed policemen in such a way as to seize Mr. Alexander while he was in the act of accepting the books.

All the arrangements were, therefore, made for a given night. The police, who usually guarded the District Attorney's office were dismissed or sent to a distance; two professional burglars, hired for the purpose by agents of the Ring and brought down from New York, were introduced into the building, and policemen in the confidence of the Ring were stationed outside, for the double purpose of preventing interruption and of following the burglars to Mr. Alexander's house when they shoud have obtained the books. The sate was blown open, a sham set of books taken out, and with these the burglars proceeded toward Mr. Alexander's house, followed at a short distance by the policemen, ready to pounce upon Alexander at the critical moment and to conveniently suffer the burglars to escape after having identified

A droll incident happened on the way. The time was one o'clock at night. The burglars, carrying the sham books, had forgotten the number of Mr. Alexander's house; and after wandering past it, and when about to ring the bell of the wrong house, the police, supposed to be in vigorous pursuit of them, had actually to call to them and direct them to the right house! Arrived there they rang the Bell, but in vain. Mr. Alexanter, thinking little or nothing of the proposed delivery of the books, and at any rate determined to take no notice of irregular proceedings with which he would have nothing to do, had gone to bed at his usual hour. The bell wakened no one in the house. The burglars and the sham police were both perplexed, the area bell was rung with no better success; and, finally, after consultation between the butglars and the police, the whole party decamped.

The next day Washington was excited by the report that a most during burglary had been committed and the safe blown up in District Attorney Harrington's office, and all means were used to show that the persecutors of the Ring had been guilty of this crime. But after a while the true story leaked out and several of the actors in it were prosecuted; but always unsuccessfully. And no wonder, for the chiefs in this conspiracy had very powerful friends, and moreover the conspiracy had been very shrewdly managed so as to conceal the chief from the knowledge of the subordinates in such a way that but two confidential agents knew who were the real authors of the plot. At least, however, by the persistent efforts of Mr. Alexan der and others. Harrington, the Distric: Actor ney, a particular friend of Shepherd and Bab cock and an intimate at the White House, was indicted and brought to trial. The case against him had been confided to Mr. A. G. Riddle as Assistant Astorney General; and Mr. Riddle, who had received his appointment because he was known to be the personal friend of some of the Ring, but who happened to be an honest and incorruptible lawyer, was about to convict Harrington, when the public was assounded first to see Harrington, then under trial for a felony and a prisoner on bail, conspicuously invited to the White House, where he appeared as a welcome and favored guest, and second, Mr. Riddle suddenly and for no reason removed from his post of prosecuting attorney. Thereupon the trial broke down. But the general conviction of Harrington's guilt was so strong that the Ring, who had used this weak young man, now found it necessary to drop him, and he drifted back to his home in Delaware and into obscurity. The prosecurion, long baffled, was not drop ped; but convenient prosecuting attorneys doctored grand juries, and during last summer a sham and falsely personated bail-giver delayed and frustrated the different attempts to bring this scandalous crime to light. At last, it seems, an investigating committee of the present House has got at the key of the mystery, and it is to be hoped that the patient efforts of Mr. Proctor Knott and his fellow committeemes will succeed in dragging the authors to the light and to punishment. Mr. Knott deserves great credit for the manner in which he has managed the investigation. He was, we remember, on the District of Columbia Committee during the Congress before the last, and there did much to prevent and to expose wrong-doing; and it must be a gratification to him that now, after a considerable interval, he has an opportunity to complete the work which he then began. - New York Herald.
